Assistant/Associate Professor, International Teacher Education
Job #12122

The Division of Teacher Preparation within the Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College (MLFTC) at Arizona State University (ASU) invites applicants for this tenured/tenure-track position. The Division of Teacher Preparation seeks an individual with a strong research program that focuses on studying and improving international teacher education at the pre-university level. More specifically, the successful candidate for this position will (1) help provide overall direction for the research agenda in international teacher education, (2) work collaboratively with the Center for Advanced Studies in Global Education (CASGE), as also located within MLFTC, and (3) exhibit excellence in research, teaching, and service.

Required Qualifications:
- Earned doctorate from an accredited university from a field in education by May 15, 2018
- Record of strong scholarly productivity in teacher education (e.g., peer-reviewed publications, book chapters, grants) appropriate to the rank of assistant or associate professor at ASU (i.e., Carnegie classified as a doctoral university of highest research activity)
- Evidence of innovative and reform-minded approaches to teacher education
- Record of successful teaching at the university level
- At least two years of consecutive experience teaching at the pre-university level
- Associate professor applicants must have a record that would make them eligible for tenure at ASU

Desired Qualifications:
- Accomplishment in obtaining and leading externally funded projects
- Experience building relationships and research synergies across international boundaries
- Experience working with multiple methods of inquiry
- Experience working with online programs
- Experience working in multiple and diverse educational contexts
- Fluency in multiple languages
- Educational experience working in Africa, Asia, the Middle East, or South America
