| Job Description   | Arizona State University’s Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College creates knowledge, mobilizes people and takes action to improve education. Nationally recognized as a leading innovator in teacher education and scholarly research, Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College prepares nearly 6,000 educators annually through bachelor’s, master’s and doctoral degree programs. Reporting to the assistant director for undergraduate student recruitment, the undergraduate student recruiter will serve an integral role on a dynamic recruitment team charged with recruiting and yielding students into undergraduate degree programs at Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College, one of the leading colleges of education in the U.S. The recruitment team is part of an integrated marketing and communications team that strengthens the college’s engagement with a number of constituencies: prospective students for our bachelors, masters and doctoral programs; applicants to those programs; alumni; foundations; and policymakers and influencers involved in the national conversations about education. The undergraduate student recruiter will be a part of a team of three undergraduate recruiters. Working at times individually and also together, recruitment team members recruit students to enroll in undergraduate degree programs on ASU campuses and other class locations as assigned, meeting new student enrollment goals set by the university and the college. The programs include elementary education, special education, secondary education and educational studies. Some, but not all, programs lead to teacher certification in the state of Arizona. The undergraduate student recruiter works independently to meet his or her own new student enrollment goals and also works as a member of a team to meet team goals. The recruiter is also responsible for building and maintaining relationships with K-12 schools and districts, community colleges, community organizations and other strategic partners to develop and leverage recruitment opportunities in service of individual and team enrollment goals. The successful candidate will be skilled at building affinity with individual prospective students, applicants, and admits, influencing their enrollment decisions. Affinity is built via telephone communication, written communication, and in-person meetings and events. The successful candidate will also be skilled at building and maintaining relationships with partner organizations and leveraging those relationships to recruit students. The successful candidate will effectively compare and contrast the value of the
The person in this position needs to be able to advocate professionally for the field of education and for future of educators in Arizona and nationally. Key partners within the college will include the other members of the graduate and undergraduate recruitment team, members of the marketing team who will provide communications support for the recruitment team, and other ASU recruiters at both the University and college levels.

In this role, the undergraduate student recruiter will gain a strong recruitment skill set and have opportunities to contribute to marketing and communications strategies and deliverables. This position is designed for people who have an interest in pursuing careers in the higher education sector and who have a specific interest in the recruiting and integrated marketing communications functions in a large, complex organization with both local and global profiles.
